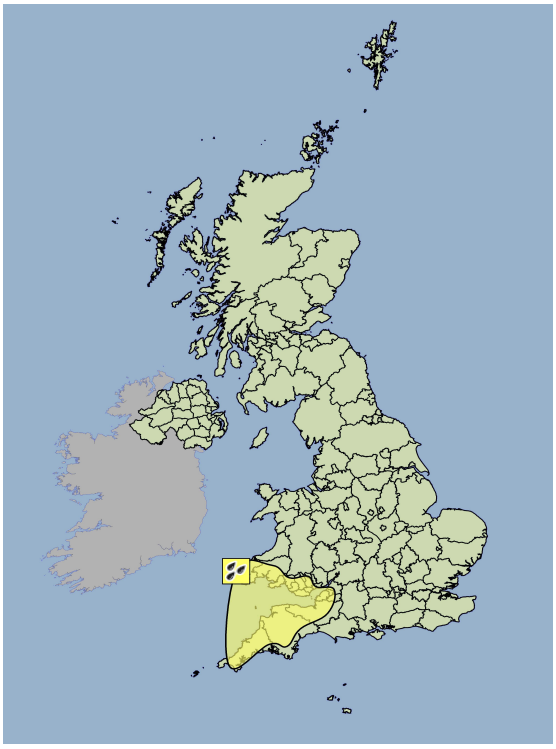
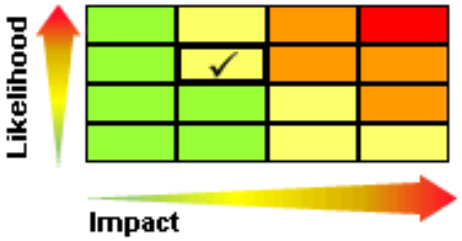
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers are likely to become heavy and prolonged across parts of southwest England and south Wales during Sunday afternoon, as a trough of low pressure moves northeastwards.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 12:00 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013 until 20:00 on Sun, 28th Jul 2013

Heavy showers and isolated thunderstorms are likely to develop during Sunday, possibly becoming prolonged in places during the afternoon.

The public should be aware of the risk of localised disruption to travel due to surface water flooding.
